Picturing the Los Angeles Jazz Scene

Horace Tapscott and the Pan Afrikan Peoples Arkestra performing at UCLA in 1981

Mark Weber, photographer, poet, and author, was a confirmed jazz fan who donated over 600 photographs (with predominant focus on photos taken in Los Angeles from 1976 to 1985) to the UCLA Performing Arts Special Collections. The photographs document well known music venues, such as the Hollywood Bowl, music festivals, such as the Playboy Jazz Festival, and small venues which may no longer exist. This notable collection documents a slice of the musical history of Los Angeles. UCLA's Digital Library Program digitized the photographs and the Cataloging & Metadata Center provided the descriptive metadata.

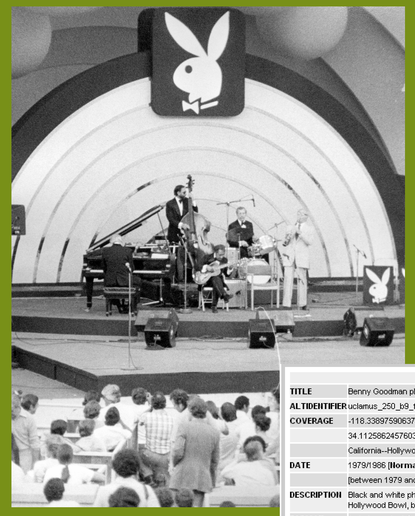
Metadata Elements

Music catalogers in the Cataloging & Metadata Center assisted the Digital Resource Coordinator in selecting data elements and their controlled vocabularies to bring out aspects of the photographs most important to musicians and researchers. Metadata includes extensive indexing of musicians, venues and musical instruments. Geo-tagging coordinates are supplied when exact locations are known.



Venues/Geo-Tagging

Known venues are indexed (source: Library of Congress Name Authority File) and geo-tags are provided.
