

Session 2: What is a Serial?

- What is the definition of a serial?
- What are the common characteristics of serials?
- What types of publications are or are not typically cataloged as serials?
- What MARC tags are most commonly used for serials?

1

Dictionary Definition of Serial

A publication issued as one of a consecutively numbered and indefinitely continued series.

2

Definition of a Serial

A continuing resource

- issued in a succession of discrete parts
- usually bearing numbering
- that has no predetermined conclusion

3

Important Elements of the Definition

- Succession of discrete parts (necessary)
- Numbering (usually)
- No predetermined conclusion (necessary)

4

Also Treat as Serials:

Publications of limited duration (AACR2 12.0A)

- Have similar characteristics and functions of serials but have a predetermined conclusion
- Examples: Newsletters from conferences, quarterly reports of projects, etc.

10

Special Types of Resources

Frequently issued editions:

Catalog as a serial only when published every year or two; otherwise treat as monograph

11

Special Types of Resources

Conference publications

- Catalog as serial if it fits the definition of a serial
The 48th Annual Meeting of the National Athletic Trainer's Association

Conference Proceedings, Animal Transportation Association 17th International Conference, September 29-October 2, 1991

- Do not catalog as a serial if there are distinctive titles or if conference publication is published in a numbered series

12

Conference Publications

Split treatment:

Summary

- Three criteria for serials: successive parts, numbering, no predetermined conclusion
- Certain resources require special considerations relating to access, control, etc.
- When unsure, review LCRI 1.0, search for records on databases, consider the needs of your library
- MARC tags for serials include special note fields and linking fields
